The Queensland Rugby Football League was formed in 1908 by seven rugby players who were dissatisfied with the administration of the Queensland Rugby Union (QRU) as the Queensland Rugby Association. Those founding fathers were Micky Dore, George Watson, Jack Fihelly, J O'Connor, E Buchanan, Alf Faulkner and Sinan Boland. Queensland had already been playing in their maroon jerseys each year against New South Wales in their sky blue before the split in rugby football between union and league took place. Queensland's captain, Mike Dore, left the rugby union establishment to play the new Northern Union brand of football in 1907 and his decision to switch codes influenced many other Queensland union players including his brother, to join the rugby league ranks.

On 14 March 1908, the breakaway group was first mentioned in the local media, and a fortnight later the first official announcement was made regarding the formation of the Queensland Rugby Association. On 16 May that year a hastily assembled Queensland team played the touring New Zealand "All Golds" side in Brisbane losing 34-12 with the other match being a 12-12 draw. Later that month there were three representative games against New South Wales in Sydney, which acted as selection trials for a national team. Queensland were thrashed 43-0 and 37-8 before going down 3-0 in the series in a tighter 12-3 loss. New South Wales domination would continue in the interstate series (including two 65-9 thrashings in 1911 and 1912) until the golden era of the 1920's when club football in Brisbane surged with the formation of the BRL in 1922 and the champion Toowoomba side that beat all comers.

They had their maiden win against NSW in Sydney 25-9 in the only game of 1922 (co-incidentally the year the BRL was formed) with a side that included a young Cyril Connell. That was the first of a golden run of 8 games in a row between 1921 and 1925, a record only equalled by Wally Lewis' great side from 1987 to 1989. In 1925 the run came to an end in the 3rd game of the series before winning the 4th and 5th games to win 4-1 that year. They lost the first two and then won the last three games of 1926. NSW won the 1927 series 3-1 which Queensland reversed in 1928 winning 3-1. From 1921 to the end of 1925 Queensland won 10 out of 11 games, up to 1926 it was 13 out of 16 and up to 1928 it was 16 out of 24. They won 6 series to 1, including 4 in a row.

NSW began to re-assert their domination after that winning 5-0 in 1929. The Queensland side of the 1920's included such greats as centre and Test captain Tommy Gorman, Duncan Thompson, "Nigger" Brown, Norm Potter and Cecil Aynsley. They were invited to tour New Zealand in 1925 and won 9, drew 1 and only lost 1 game. Queensland also had a great run against touring teams around this time winning 8 straight games against international sides between 1921 and 1930 of which 2 were against Great Britain and 6 against New Zealand. During the 1930's Queensland were able to win 2 series and draw 2 series with sides that included great such as "Mick" Madsen and Jack Reardon.

In the pre-Origin days of interstate football series wins (and draws) were far and few in between other than the golden era of the 1920's. Those series included 1931 (won 3-2), 1932 (won 2-0, 1 drawn), 1934 (drew 2-2 with 1 drawn), 1939 (drew 2-2), 1940 (won 3-1), 1951 (won 2-1), 1953 (drew 2-2), 1955 (drew 2-2), 1959 (won 3-1), 1960 (drew 2-2) and 1961 (drew 2-2). The biggest Queensland wins in the pre-Origin days were a 38-0 thrashing in 1926 and a 45-8 victory in 1940.

The 1950's and beginning of the 1960's was the zenith of Bulimba Cup football with all three sides producing many test players. Some of the great players for Queensland in this era included Brian Davies (Australian captain in the 1958 Ashes series), "Mick" Crocker, Pat McMahon, Jack Vievers, Norm Pope, Kel O'Shea, Des McGovern, Denis Flannery, Gary Parcell, Dud Beattie, Frank Drake, Noel Kelly, Barry Muir, Henry Holloway Lionel Morgan, Elton Rasmussen, John Gleeson and Mick Vievers.

Between 1938 and 1953 Queensland had a great record against touring international teams. They won 5 games (2 against Great Britain, 2 against New Zealand and 1 against South Africa), drew 1 game 22-all against Puig Aubert's conquering Frenchmen and lost 2 games against New Zealand. Greg Mallory in his book "Voices from Brisbane Rugby League" recalled seeing Puig Aubert playing for France in 1957 in a World Cup game between France and New Zealand at the Exhibition Ground as a boy. He kicked off and the ball went between the posts, such was his kicking prowess, and remembers querying his father why it wasn't a goal.

Queensland's record against touring international teams for the next 25 years between 1954 and 1979 was a lot more lean. They only beat France twice in 1960 and 1964, South Africa in 1963 and New Zealand in 1967. They would 11 losses in that period including 7 against Great Britain. Queensland did embark on their first international tour since the Tommy Gorman's 1925 Queensland side when a Queensland side, including Wayne Bennett, Johnny Lang and current ARLC chairman, John Grant, toured New Zealand in 1972. They won all 3 games against provincial New Zealand sides.

From the early 1960's on the effect of the poker machine revenue available to Sydney clubs (when such gambling wasn't legal in Queensland) had a profound effect in luring the creme of the Brisbane talent to the Sydney competition which saw a huge imbalance begin to occur between the states in the interstate series.

The year 1959 was the last series win and 1961 the last drawn series to Queensland before State of Origin came along. Apart from two draws, Queensland would next win a game in 1967, then won a game in 1968, one game in 1970 and then the last game Queensland would win before State of Origin was in 1975 when Barry Muir's team won 14-8. They lost the second game and almost took the series losing by one point (9-8) in the third game. That year Barry Muir would inspire his troops by calling the Blues "the cockroaches", an insulting nicknamed that has carried to this day. An honourable mentioned should be given to the 1974 side of the year before that lost the first game 22-13 and then drew the two games after that.

In total the period from 1962 to 1979 was a very dark period for Queensland in the interstate series. NSW won 52 out of 60 games with Queensland only winning 4 and drawing 4 games and it was getting bitter seeing NSW beating Queensland with a lot of players who originally came from Queensland such as Elton Rasmussen, John Wittenberg, Johnny Rhodes, John McDonald, Arthur Beetson, Rod Reddy, Johnny Lang, Greg Oliphant and Rod Morris. Paul Hogan famously told a Queensland Rugby League gathering in 1977 that "every time Queensland produces a good footballer, he finishes up being processed through a New South Wales poker machine." Something desperately had to be done to correct the huge imbalance.

By the 1970's the prestige of interstate matches had been seriously downgraded. Matches were played mid-week, so as not to interfere with the Sydney club competition, and before small crowds in New South Wales when the interstate games were hosted at Leichhardt Ovals. Interstate football reached its nadir in 1977 when the New South Wales Rugby Football League (NSWRFL) declined to host the Queensland team, and both interstate games were played in Queensland

Former Queensland captain and Australian vice-captain Jack Reardon, who had later become a journalist, was the first to suggest that Sydney-based Queenslanders should be available for selection to represent their state. Brisbane Courier-Mail reporter Hugh Lunn, Barry Maranta (the future co-founder of the Brisbane Broncos) and Maranta's business partner Wayne Reid played a part in persuading QRL chairman Ron McAuliffe that the concept could be used in rugby league. Lunn told McAuliffe that "you can take the Queenslander out of Queensland, Ron, but you can't take Queensland out of the Queenslander." The Origin concept was not an original idea. It was borrowed from Aussie Rules which had introduced a successful State of Origin promotion between Victoria and Western Australia in 1977. The fact that Western Australia defeated Victoria encouraged McAuliffe, who gleaned valuable information from the then president of the VFL, Dr Allen Aylett, when the pair were on the Rothmans Sports Foundation. Reid spoke to NSWRFL president Kevin Humphreys and suggested that a one-off state of origin match could be used as a Test Match selection trial.

New South Wales clubs were reticent in their support of the concept and set two conditions: If the third game was to decide the series it was not to be played under Origin rules, and also, that the expatriate Queenslanders would be under the supervision of a representative of the NSWRFL whose duty it would be to protect the interests of both the NSWRFL and the clubs to which they were contracted. To those clubs were refusing to release players, Humphreys threatened to make the game an official Australian Rugby League trial, which would make release mandatory. The clubs backed down.

After Queensland lost the first two interstate matches in 1980 (35-3 and 17-7, the second game in front of only 1,638 Sydneysiders) it was announced that a 'state of origin' match would take place on 8 July at Lang Park in Brisbane. Ron McAuliffe was committed to the concept and vigorously promoted the match. Thousands of tickets were sold before the game had been officially sanctioned. Although interstate matches in Brisbane had still been well attended (24,653 had attended the opening match of the 1979 series), few expected the sell-out crowd of 33,210 Queensland rugby league fans, delighted to see their heroes in the likes of Arthur Beetson representing their home state for the first time ever. Queensland convincingly beat New South Wales 20-10. That first game has gone down in rugby league folklore.

The first points scored in Origin Football was a penalty goal by Queensland centre Mal Meninga - the first of seven goals from seven attempts he would kick in the match (on his 20th birthday no less), while New South Wales' winger Greg Brentnall had the honour of scoring the first try in State of Origin football following good lead up work by Kangaroos Graham Eadie and Mick Cronin. After an all-in brawl in the first half (when Arthur Beetson appeared to punch his Parramatta teammate Mick Cronin) and leading 9-5 at the break, Queensland took over the game and defeated NSW 20-10, the first time Qld had won a state game over NSW since 1975. Queensland centre Chris Close was the standout player from both sides, scoring a try in the second half and was a clear choice as Man of the Match. From a standing start, Close received the ball only 25m out from Meninga. He then simply accelerated through a big hole in the NSW defense and evaded fullback Graham Eadie to put the ball down next to the goal posts without a NSW player touching him.

Also playing that night was a young Wally Lewis who would take over the next year as captain and dominate State of Origin like no other player in the game. Alan Clarkson, a journalist for The Sydney Morning Herald wrote of the State of Origin experiment, "I was strongly against such a match, but last night's gripping clash showed that such a fixture would be a welcome addition to the League program."

In 1981 the first two interstate matches were again played under the old selection rules. As New South Wales won the first two matches in the series, state of origin selection rules were used once more in the third match. Legendary captain Arthur Beetson was ready to play before injury ruled him out, so he became coach of the team, and would remain so for the next three years. It seemed that State of Origin might still be dominated by New South Wales with the Blues ahead 15-0, but a remarkable comeback by Queensland saw them defeat New South Wales 22-15 with young captain Wally Lewis and Chris Close the stars of the comeback win. This match gave rugby league officials the impetus to decide that 1982 should have 2 State of Origin matches and a decider if required.

In 1982, for the first time all three matches of the interstate series were played using 'origin' selection rules. New South Wales won their first State of Origin match in Game One, but this was not enough to stop Queensland winning the second and third games with Mal Meninga, Rod Morris and captain Wally Lewis the heroes for Queensland of the series. Queensland won their first interstate series since 1959 when they won the decider 10-5 in Sydney. The deciding try occurred when Wally Lewis pounced on a terrible in-goal pass by Phil Sigsworth.

Before the interstate series Queensland won its first side against an international touring side since 1967. They beat an awful New Zealand side that dropped a ridiculous amount of ball by 31-16 at Lang Park. Souths winger, Wayne Challis scored 3 tries with Wally Lewis, Mal Meninga, Tony Currie and Brad Backer also scoring.

In 1983 Queensland proved it was no fluke when they won a second straight series 2-1. State of Origin was beginning to take interstate football to new heights. Queensland was developing a high quality side that would dominate in the same way the Queensland side of the 1920's had dominated. New South Wales won the second game, but Queensland dominated the first (24-12) and the decider (43-22) winning the series with Wally Lewis being the saviour for Queensland. Wally Lewis had the game on a string. The most extraordinary part of the night was being stunned by the half time score on the scoreboard. After dominating the first half Wally Lewis potted a field goal in the last few seconds of the first half and Queensland led 33-0 at the break—an absolutely stunning turnaround from all those floggings during the 1970's.

At the end of the 1983 seasons in Qld and NSW, the Queensland team also toured Papua New Guinea and Great Britain. They beat Highland Zone 34-16 and ran up a cricket score against the President's XIII winning 106-3. Their tour of Great Britain saw them play three matches. The first against Hull Kingston Rovers resulted in an 8-6 loss, though the Wally Lewis led Maroons then easily won their remaining matches against Wigan (40-2) and Leeds (58-2).

In 1984, Queensland won the first two games for the series, dominating the series, with Kerry Boustead and Wally Lewis the stars of the series, New South Wales won the final match. The series is best remembered for the try by Greg Dowling in pouring rain in the second game. Wally Lewis put the ball in the air which hit the crossbar and bounced back into the hands of Greg Dowling who fell over the line to score. Wally Lewis was King of the world of rugby league that year. He led Wynnum-Manly to win the pre-season contest, the State League and the BRL premiership. He captained Queensland to win the State of Origin series and captained Australia to win the 1984 Ashes series at home and then finished the season captaining Oceania in their 54-4 defeat of Europe in Paris in a one-off game to celebrate 50 years of rugby league in France. He was rested and Mal Meninga took over as captain in a mid-season game between Queensland and New Zealand which Queensland won 18-14.

In 1985, Queensland saw their first ever series loss to New South Wales, for the first time. NSW won the first game 18-2 in Sydney. The painful irony of that loss was that all of NSW's points were scored by union convert Michael O'Connor who had played all his rugby union for Queensland before switching to play for Manly. His prior union playing for Queensland was not counted in his selection for NSW. Steve Mortimer, playing with the sort of passion that Queenslanders show on the field, brilliantly led NSW to win the 2nd game to take the series with Queensland consoled by a 20-6 win in the 3rd game.

Under new coach, Wayne Bennett, the 1986 series saw Queensland play a lot better but the scoreboard didn't show, Queensland lost all 3 games, only by small margins for each game, but the fact was still that New South Wales had whitewashed Queensland.

Prior to the 1987 series a one-off Origin selection trial game was played at Lang Park between a Queensland Residents team versus Queensland expatriates based in NSW playing in the Sydney competition. In what was a cracking game played at a fast pace the NSW-based Queenslanders eventually pulled away in the second half to win 20-10. The better fitness of the players playing for Sydney clubs proved the difference. The half back battle saw Sydney-based Laurie Spina outplay a diminutive Ipswich halfback, Allan Langer. Despite that the Queensland selectors gambled on selecting Allan Langer who did not let Queensland down that season and would become a legend in his own right with the Broncos and playing for Queensland in following years. Following that trial Queensland toured New Zealand beating the NZ President's XIII 18-14 and Bay of Plenty 72-6. Later in the season New Zealand toured Australia shocking them in a one-off test but also defeating Queensland 22-16.

In 1987, looking for redemption, Queensland lost the first game to New South Wales by literally an inch. The scores were locked at 16-all near full time Mark McGaw threw an inside pass that was knocked down by Queensland but was kicked ahead into the Maroon's in-goal. Mick Stone was forced to make a split second decision without the help of the video replay system that we have today. Stone ruled that McGaw had touched down an inch inside the dead-ball line for a try. Video replays showed Stone correct, making his decision one of the best and bravest rulings ever made which was no consolation for Wayne Bennett who had lost four games in a row. They came managed to win the last two games 12-6 and 10-8 giving Wayne Bennett his first series win. Allan Langer's debut in the 1987 series saw Queensland win their first series since 1984, Langer went on to play 34 games for Queensland. In the exhibition match, the fourth interstate game of 1987 in the USA, Queensland was in party mood and didn't take game as seriously as NSW did with NSW winning it 30-18.

In 1988, the introduction of Queensland based clubs for the first grade Sydney-come-national competition Brisbane Broncos and Gold Coast, saw more wealth of talent for Queensland. In 1988 and 1989 it was Allan Langer and Wally Lewis's formidable halves partnership that had them dominate both series winning all 6 matches and not letting New South Wales win. Wayne Bennett won the 1988 series while returning coach Arthur Beetson won the 1989 series. As a result, in 1989 a record-breaking twelve Queenslanders were selected to tour with the Australian national team. Adding in the last two official series games of 1987 (and excluding the USA exhibition game) Queensland had won 8 games in a row to equal the record set by the dominating Queensland side of the 1920's.

The sides of 1988 and 1989 were full of legendary Queensland players—Wally Lewis, Allan Langer, Gary Belcher, Mal Meninga, Gene Miles, Michael Hancock, Tony Currie, Dale Shearer, Paul Vautin, Trevor Gillmeister, Martin Bella, Sam Backo, Greg Conescu and Kerrod Walters. In 1988 they won their games 26-18, 16-6 and 38-22. In 1989 the winning scores to Queensland were even more dominant—36-6, 16-12 and 36-16. The second game of 1988 is probably best remembered by the crowd reaction after Wally Lewis was controversially sent off. Venting their displeasure cans of beer were thrown onto the field by angry spectators. I was on the rock wall near the scoreboard and I was watched the sight nearby in amazement. The second game of 1989 is best remembered by one of Wally Lewis's greatest ever tries. Four of Queensland's star players had been injured the game and Queensland were just hanging in there. Trevor Gillmeister cut a NSW runner in half with one of his classic tackles in which the ball spilled onto the ground. The ball was passed to Wally Lewis who sliced through defenders to score in the corner.

In 1990, the New South Wales team managed to win their first game since 1987, and went on to defeat the Queensland team 2-1 in the series, giving Queensland coach Arthur Beetson his first ever series loss with the team. The deciding game was the first to be played in Melbourne.

In 1991, it was Queensland legend Wally Lewis' last series. With a new coach, Graham Lowe, and a host of new inexperienced players Queensland won the first game, before New South Wales won the second. With Lewis's last game, the decider, the Queensland team managed to win the game by two points and give Lewis the perfect sendoff.

For the series 1992 to 1994 it seemed that Wally Lewis was sorely missed, losing a record three series in a row. With veteran Mal Meninga taking over as captain, Lowe continuing as coach, the Queensland team were unable to show any spark against New South Wales. They were able to win a game in each of the series in 1992, 1993, and 1994. The King Wally Lewis took over coaching for the Queensland team in 1993 and 1994, the QRL hoping he would revive some spark to the team. The first game of 1994 saw Queensland needing two tries in the last 10 minutes to win the game. They scored one and then on the last play of the game the ball was passed through what seemed like a dozen hands as the ball went across one side of the ground to the other before reaching the hands of Mark Coyne who dived over for the "miracle try" that won Queensland the game 14-12. Sadly they couldn't a strong NSW team that won the next two games.

In 1995, the Queensland team was noticeably hampered being unable to select players from the Super League teams, most notably the Brisbane Broncos. With new coach and former Queensland captain Paul Vautin, the Queensland team were apparently going to be belted by the New South Wales team. It was not to be. In one of the biggest upsets in Origin history, the baby Queensland team defied all betting odds and whitewashed the New South Wales team 3-0.

In 1996, New South Wales, with their strongest ever team in my opinion, got their revenge and whitewashed the Queensland team 3-0. In 1997, during the Super League War the game was split with the State of Origin only featuring players from ARL-loyal based teams. Fatty Vautin's Queenslanders lost a very close series 2-1. In the rival Super League Tri-series with another Queensland, New South Wales and a New Zealand representative team, Queensland were unable to win the series. They lost to NSW 38-10 in the opening game before qualifying for the final by beating New Zealand 26-12. Queensland faced New South Wales again in the final at ANZ Stadium in Brisbane. What an epic game the final turned out to be but unfortunately with the wrong result. The sides were locked at 22-all at full time before there was 20 minutes of sudden death golden point football. Noel Goldthorpe's field goal saw NSW win the only Tri-Series by 23-22.

In 1998, Queensland re-employed Wayne Bennett as coach of the team who only wanted a one year stint at the team. With the Super League War over, Queensland was able to pick a great side again. Allan Langer returned in style in a man of the match appearance guiding the Queensland team to another epic, come-from-behind, 24-23 win in the first game. New South Wales won the second, but Queensland dominated the third and won.

In 1999 with new coach and former Queensland player Mark Murray at the helm the Queensland team won the first before losing the second. In controversial circumstances, Queensland were locked up at 6 all at half-time, scored with 8 minutes to go making it 10-6 seemingly wrapping up the game, but New South Wales scored and missed the conversion to finish the game 10-all, making it the first drawn game and series in State of Origin history. Queensland won the series by retaining the drawn shield. 2000 was a forgettable series with captain Gordon Tallis sent from the field for dissent to referee Bill Harrigan in a 20-16 loss in Game One. Queensland lost Game Two 28-10 before suffering their worst ever State of Origin defeat 56-16 in Game Three to cap a 3-0 whitewash of the series.

In 2001, Wayne Bennett again took over after their humiliating 3-0 loss in 2000. Queensland won the first game decisively however injuries saw them lose the second game and those injuries were still there for Game Three. This saw coach Bennett take a huge risk, bringing out of retirement Allan Langer to make a miraculous comeback. Although some thought Langer couldn't rise to the challenge, the great halfback inspired Queensland to a win in the final game 40-14.

In 2002, Langer again returned however Queensland were thumped in Game One 32-4. Queensland won Game Two 26-18 in spite of a horror debut by winger Justin Hodges who gifted New South Wales two tries via ingoal mistakes. The third game proved to be Langers final game, but a miraculous last minute try by back rower Dane Carlaw saw Queensland draw level with New South Wales 18-all. The game could have been won by Queensland if Lote Tuqiri had converted the Carlaw try, but the conversion was wide thus resulting in the second drawn series in Origin history with Queensland retaining the shield.

The 2003 series, marked a period of New South Wales dominance at Origin. New South Wales won a hard fought first game 25-12 before disposing of Queensland 27-4 in Game Two. The Queensland team took their anger out by flogging New South Wales in the dead rubber third game 36-6.

Queensland could not stop New South Wales taking the 2004 series 2–1 even with new coach Michael Hagan, when Brad Fittler came out of representative retirement for New South Wales to help them defeat Queensland. Game One was notable for being the first State of Origin game to go into Golden Point extra time, with Shaun Timmins kicking the winning field goal for New South Wales to win 9–8. Queensland won Game Two 22–18 on the back of an incredible try to winger Billy Slater the game in which Fitter returned. New South Wales wouldn't be denied in Game Three, winning 36–14 on the back of an inspirational performance by Fittler.

The 2005 series again was not much better for Queensland in spite of an absolutely classic Game One win in Golden Point extra time due to an intercept try to Matthew Bowen off a wayward Brett Kimmorley pass. Queensland however failed to dominate the series losing the final two matches to lose again to New South Wales after halfback Andrew Johns made a memorable return for the final two games. Queensland's 2005 series loss marked their third straight series defeat to New South Wales.

In 2006, former Queensland great Mal Meninga took the helm of coach and he took a big risk in Game One to have seven debutantes against a formidable New South Wales side. This showed in the opening 30 minutes where mistakes were made and New South Wales dominated on the scoreboard. A comeback in the second half wasn't enough to win, New South Wales getting home 17–16 on the back of a field goal in the final moments by halfback and last minute Blues replacement Brett Finch. This put coach Meninga and captain Darren Lockyer under intense criticism by New South Wales media. The second game however saw the fired up Queensland team defeat New South Wales easily 30–6. In the third and deciding game, Queensland found themselves down 14–4 with 9 minutes to go after two of the worst ever video refereeing decisions yet Queensland still managed to rise above it. A miraculous comeback started by Johnathan Thurston and Brent Tate and an intercept try by Lockyer saw them steal the win and the series.

In 2007, Queensland were the bookies' favourites for the first time in a long time. Queensland were down 18–6 at half time but came back with 19 unanswered points to win the first game by a score of 25–18. Queensland went on to win the second game 10–6 and win the series. This was Queensland's first win in 12 attempts at Telstra Stadium. Queensland had won two series in a row for the first time since the 1980's.

In 2008, Queensland played without Darren Lockyer for the whole series and it showed in the first game in Sydney with Queensland losing 18–10. However, the return match in Brisbane saw Queensland return to form winning 30–0, equalling Queensland's biggest ever victory. The final game was again played at Telstra Stadium, with Queensland being down 10–8 at half time before coming back to win the game 16–10 leaving New South Wales pointless for the second half and on the wrong end of 3 successive series defeats. Queensland had begun the break their curse at the Olympic Stadium where they had struggled to win for so many years in a row. Mal's new stars had won three series in a row to emulate the Origin feat of Wally Lewis' 1980 dominating team which won 3 in a row twice (1982-1984 & 1987-1989).

In 2009, the Maroons became the first side to win four consecutive Origin series and were named sporting team of the year at the Queensland Sports Awards in December. They won the first 24–14, lost the second game 28–16 and won the decider 28–24. The mid-season test against the Kiwis in 2009 saw a record-equalling ten Queensland representatives, including an all maroon backline and front row. Mal's mighty men that were a part of what would become a magnificent 8 series in a row included such stars as Darren Lockyer, Cameron Smith, Billy Slater, Cooper Cronk, Greg Inglis, Israel Folau, Brent Tate, Justin Hodges, Steve Price, Petero Civoniceva, Dallas Johnson, Nate Myles and many others.

In 2010, the Maroons had their 5th consecutive series win, whilst also winning the games in a 3–0 clean sweep, the first time Queensland had accomplished this since 1995. Billy Slater was named Man of the Series. The first game was a close win 28–24. In the second game in Brisbane they powered to a 34–6 win before fighting off a determined NSW to win the decider in Sydney 23–18.

In 2011, the Maroons had their 6th consecutive series win becoming the only team to ever do so. Also winning game III 34–24 and the series 2–1 in front of a record home crowd at Suncorp Stadium. This was also their captain Darren Lockyer's final State of Origin game. Cameron Smith was named both Man of the Match and Series.

In 2012, Queensland won and then lost in the first two close games. Game 3 was even tighter with Queensland winning 21–20 through a Cooper Cronk field goal in front of a mostly Maroon crowd at Suncorp Stadium, making it a mind-blowing 7 series wins in a row. The final score was attributed partly to the retirement of Petero Civoniceva. Johnathon Thurston was named Man of the Match and Nate Myles was awarded Man of the Series.

In 2013, Queensland took the series again, for an unprecedented 8th time in a row They lost the first game 14–6 and then powered to a 26–6 win in the second game. They won the thirrd game at ANZ Stadium in Sydney 12–10. Brent Tate was awarded Man of the Match.

In 2014, Queensland were defeated in an upset at their home stadium in game 1 of the series by 12–8. Queensland then lost the second game in Sydney 6–4, ending their amazing 8 year winning streak. New South Wales dominated in the first game and were deserving winners but were outplayed in the second game and were lucky to win after Queensland were controversially denied a try that would have won them the game. Queensland exacted revenge in the last game of 2014 at Suncorp Stadium by thrashing New South Wales 32–8.

In the early curtain raiser Queensland Residents (the best of the non-NRL Queensland Cup players) beat NSW Residents (the best of the non-NRL NSW Cup players) 24–16. This annual second-tier interstate game has been played since 1992 with NSW Residents winning 12 and Queensland Residents winning 11 of them.

Played 221, NSW 159, Queensland 54, drawn 8

The first two games of both the 1980 and 1981 were played on a residential basis (Queenslanders based in Sydney in the Sydney competition playing for NSW). If NSW won the first two the last game was played on a state of origin basis. So successful was the new format that from 1982 on the whole of each series was played on a state of origin basis.

Tom Gorman, one of Australia's finest ever centres, and the first Queenslander to captain the Kangaroos.

And then there is this tribute, from Redcap after one stellar performance, against New Zealand, in 1926: 'Gorman was wonderfully slippery in attack, uncanny in making the opening and drawing the defender, a magician at handling, a zig-zag runner who has developed characteristics which no centre of other days possessed, (and) a defender without peer.'

The Queensland team of 1940, pictured here, stunned NSW by winning a four-match series 3-1 despite losing the opening encounter 52-11. In 1941, the last season of interstate football before these games were shut down because of the war, the Blues prevailed 3-1, despite the best efforts of some of the Maroon heroes of 1940, including captain Babe Collins (centre of front row) and his deputy Jack Reardon (fourth from left, front row).

QUEENSLAND FOOTBALL'S GREAT DAY of the year came when the Maroons, against all expectations, defeated the British team 25-24, with the local players afforded a £5 bonus in the midst of the euphoria on top of their £10 match fee. In the interstate series, however, NSW were dominant, winning all three matches decisively.

In July 1980 the birth of State of Origin rugby league began as the last game in the series was player Under State of Origin rules. Queensland had its players back who went to the Sydney clubs rather than playing against them in the NSW Blue.

Queensland won an epic encounter 20-10 with Chris Close winning man of the match with a sensational try weaving past Blues players and Mal Meninga, who turned 20 that night, kicking 7 out of 7.

The biggest cheer, though, was when legendary forward Arthur Beetson returned home to lead the Maroons out that night. His fight with Parramatta team-mate Mick Cronin is part of Origin folklore.

Artie says 'let's do it again' after...

By DAVID FALKENHIRE
Arthur Beetson was nursing a sore head this morning — but he reckons it was worth it.

Beetson, Queensland's favorite son, celebrated after leading the Maroons to their memorable 20-10 win over New South Wales at Lang Park last night.

And just for good measure ... at the age of 35 ... he was one of the best players on the field.

"I had never played for Queensland and I doubt if I have ever been so determined to win," Beetson said today.

"It is one of the highlights of my career."

Beetson said he had no doubts a state-of-origin match should be played annually.

"I am more convinced than ever after last night," he said. It was Beetson's first representative match since 1977 and it may well be his last.

After 15 years of Sydney football with Balmain, Easts, and now Parramatta, he admits his career is nearly finished.

THE NIGHT WE BEAT THE BLUES

Queensland last night produced the magic to beat New South Wales 20-10 in an historic state-of-origin rugby league match at Lang Park.

Queensland league followers have been saying it for years: Give us our players back, Sydney, and we will beat the Blues.

So they gave us back a Magnificent Seven — seven players from Queensland playing with Sydney clubs — who combined with the best north of the border to defeat "the Unbeatables."

Evergreen Artie Beetson, Johnny Lang, Kerry Boustead, Greg Oliphant, Rod Morris, Allan Smith and Rod Reddy provided experience to galvanise the locals.

And the locals more than did

There were fears before the inaugural State of Origin match that club team-mates would 'go easy' on each other. But QRL boss Ron McAuliffe (right) was a strong supporter of the concept, and the skirmishes and tough confrontations that were a feature of the early exchanges (such as the one pictured above) quickly confirmed that Origin football had a future.

It was an extraordinary game with NSW going out to a 15-0 lead in the first half.

Queensland got back in it with a try just before half time and then added another 17 unanswered points, including a controversial penalty try to win the game 22-15.

THE FACE OF GREATNESS

HE'S got the top halfbacks of the past decade singing his praises. "I'll concede right now that he's a better player than I ever was," said the great Tommy Raudonikis. "Langer might just turn out to be the best ever."

With praise like that it's no wonder that you'd find 25,000 fans willing to wear a mask depicting the little Bronco, Maroon and Roo dynamo.

The promotion by Brisbane's 104FM captured a mood of reverence and deep affection for the plucky half at the first '89 State of Origin match, but you can rest assured that the Blues don't feel the same way about their rival — nor would the sight of 25,000 Alfies console them one little bit.

A NSW attempt to get the same sort of support up and running for Langer's opposite number, the trier Greg Alexander, went down like a bag of shit down a coal shaft; it fell flat splat.

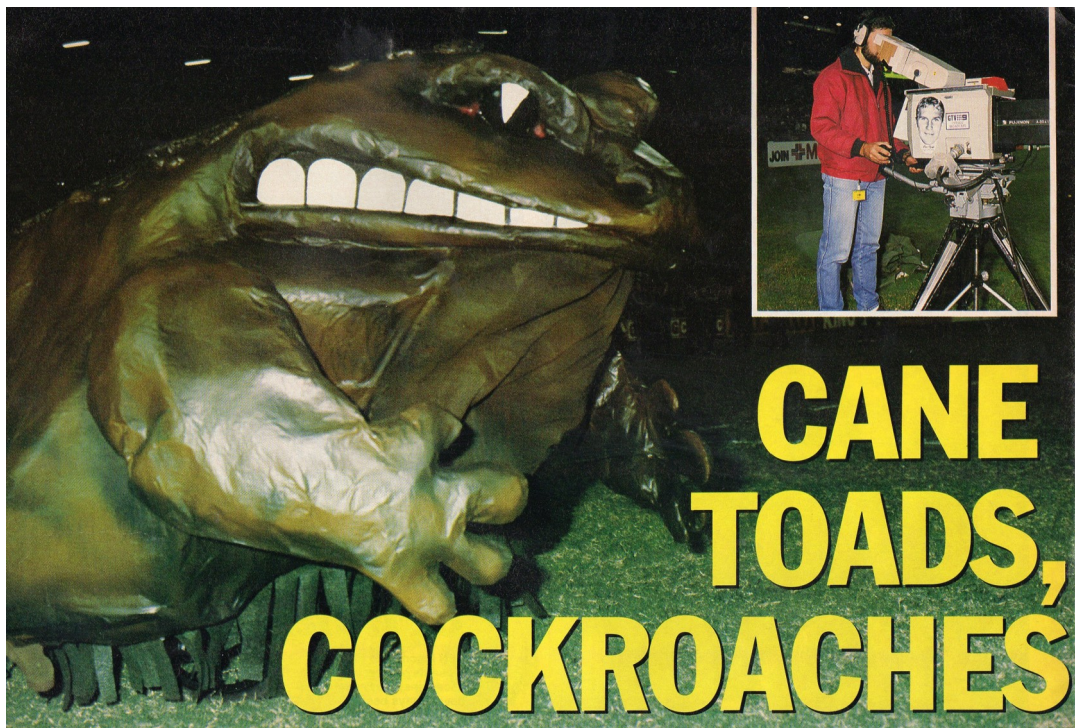

The beautiful thing about all this is that even after the match you can use your Langer mask for a host of purposes. For a start, you can use it to get into Brisbane nightclubs where you wouldn't get within cooee if you only had your real face to present to the doorman. What true blue Queensland bouncer would turn little Alfie away?

The mask will also help you get VIP treatment at any hospital. You want your own doctor? How about a private ward? Fancy that nurse over there? No problems! Your Langer mask gets you in where no American Express card ever could.

There are more benefits to being Allan Langer than you can possibly imagine.

The insult that became a marketing goldmine

COCKROACHES!

AN UNKEMPT Sydney motel is chiefly responsible for the "cockroach" tag which Queenslanders have gleefully applied to Rugby League players from New South Wales.

Former Test great Barry Muir, the man credited with naming NSW the "cockies", says if the motel had been cleaner, the word may never have been uttered.

"It was back in 1974, and I was coaching Queensland in the interstate series," he recalled.

"We were in camp in a Sydney motel preparing for the second match and were watching a replay of the first game when this dirty big cockroach crawled up the screen. He crawled all the way up the side the NSW players were defending.

"Just to gee up the blokes a bit, I said something like: 'These blokes attract cockroaches. Maybe they ARE cockroaches'."

"Then the next day at training I called the Blues the cockroaches again, only this time I was in earshot of some Sydney journo. I said something like: 'We've got to belt these bloody cockroaches'."

"They wrote about it in the press. One thing led to another, the whole thing was blown out of all proportion, and the name stuck. And I didn't mind one bit."

Muir said that after the tag had been entrenched in NSW-Queensland relations, he found it much easier to refer to the opposition as 'cockroaches'.

By TONY DURKIN

"It was just so natural. They were the pests from the south," he said.

Muir says he feels no guilt whatsoever about being responsible for depositing such a degrading name on one of the world's premier teams.

"Not one bit. We even named the great Graeme Langlands the King Cockroach," he said.

"We had to beat the buggers the best way we could, and if calling them cockroaches upset them and stirred them up, then we had achieved our aim. I'm sure that at odd times, it did work."

"I must admit, though, that when I first used the name, I never thought it would be as popular as it is today. I'm sure State of Origin football helped in that regard."

And QRL marketing manager, Mike Beston, agrees.

"Throughout State of Origin, the cockroach has been a hugely successful marketing play for us," he said.

"Our attitude now is when you're on a good thing, stick to it."

Muir though, has one regret about his association with the term "cockroach".

"I didn't patent the name," he said.

"It probably isn't legal to patent the name of an insect, but I wish I'd tried. I may have been a millionaire by now."

The saga of the Lang Park cockroaches... and the pests are exterminated. It's almost a microcosm of State of Origin football. INSET: Barry Muir.

"THE toughest by far." That was how Queensland skipper Cameron Smith rated this year's State of Origin series in Queensland's seven-year reign after the Maroons won an epic decider 21-20 against NSW at Suncorp Stadium last night.

Coach Mal Meninga revealed Cooper Cronk had been hitting the ball sweetly as he practised his field goals at training at Suncorp on Tuesday night before lining up last night's 75th minute pearly from 39m out to decide the game.

While Origin games have been won by field goals before, a one-pointer has never clinched a series until Cronk's cool strike.

The win sent veteran Queensland prop Petero Cionciveva out a winner in his final Origin game and cemented Maroons' halfback Johnathan Thurston as an Origin great with the Cowboys star named man of the match.

Thurston has carried a heavy burden wearing the No.6 jumper of former Queensland skipper Darren Lockyer, who was sent out a winner last year at the same ground. Thurston badly hurt his knee that night and joined the on-field celebrations in a wheelchair.

Last night's game started in explosive fashion with an all-in-brawl and NSW skipper Paul Gallen penalised for striking Brent Tate, but it was Tate who was charged after the match for striking second-rower Greg Bird later in the brawl. With an early guilty plea Tate will not miss a game.

SHOT OF A LIFETIME: Cooper Cronk slots the winning field goal despite a desperate Paul Gallen.
